A lot has changed since I first reviewed a Kemper in 2012. As well as new amps, effects and refinements to the actual profiling algorithm, the big stories have been the software release for Performance Mode, which enables you to manage Rigs in groups for live playing, the inclusion of a library of bass amps and cabinets, the option of an integral 600W solid-state power amp, and the arrival of ...

Profiling an amp is kind of like capturing an amp's "soul." The basic procedure is you mic an amp, and the mic's output feeds the Kemper. You then patch a cable from the Kemper's direct out to the amp's input jack, listen to what the amp sounds like through the mic, and when it sounds as desired, start the profiling process.

Gear Review: Kemper Profiler Head - Full Compass Live

The Kemper Profiling Amplifier enables you to do what generations of guitar players have been waiting for: to capture the soul of all your amps (and so many more) inside a lunchbox-sized amplifier. With cutting edge technology Kemper captures the sonic DNA of virtually any guitar amp for vivid and dynamic sound.
