The N6006 itself is a multimode semi-professional AF autowinding SLR, with more features than you can possibly remember without cribbing notes on the back of your hand. In fact this is one of those cameras I definitely recommend getting either a copy of the manual or at least a Magic Lantern Guide for.

I have an N6006. I really haven't used it in years event for a year ago or so when I shot two rolls of Tri-X. Everything worked. Like brand new. All the features. Metering (I needed a new battery). Amazing piece of technology with PASM, manual, auto focus etc. I don't care for it's lens a 35-70mm. I think. Not very sharp.

Ihave just bought my fifth N6006 Nikon, convincing myself that it is one of the best film cameras available at any price. My price, $5. I will sell it on consignment for over $100 with a lens (bought separately). It was supposedly broken but only had a dead battery. Bought a D50 Nikon for $100 broken but the camera was fine, the lens was junk.
