States And Power In Africa

"States and Power in Africa" is not only a criticism of the state system on Africa's unique history and condition but is a debate in war and peace. What historians and theorists rarely touch on is the counter-factual, 'what would Africa look like, what could have Africa developed outside of colonialism?'

States and Power in Africa: Comparative Lessons in Authority and Control is a book on African state-building by Jeffrey Herbst, former Professor of Politics and International Affairs at Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs. The book was a co-winner of the 2001 Gregory Luebbert Book Award from the American Political Science Association in comparative politics.

States and Power in Africa - Wikipedia

In States and Power in Africa, Jeffrey Herbst places the African state-building process in a truly comparative perspective. Herbst's bold contention—that the conditions now facing African state-builders existed long before European penetration of the continent—is sure to provoke controversy, for it runs counter to the prevailing assumption that colonialism changed everything.
